Work/Life

The following references document and analyze bias against care-givers in academia, those faculty members who cannot depend on what Williams (2000) calls a “flow of family work” which allows ideal workers to log long hours at work while still having their material needs met.

