NEGOTIATING UP

Mary Lidstrom
University of Washington
College of Engineering
July 29, 2005
Outline

- Negotiating for resources
- Faculty searches and Start-Up
- Working with the Provost
- Managing up
Negotiating for Resources

- Come with great ideas!
- Lay a Foundation
- Be consistent over time
- Make clear the expected impact (esp. wrt college goals)
Negotiating for Resources

- Partner with other units where possible
- Keep it to one page if you can
- Use data in your analysis if you can
- Stay away from “entitlement” arguments
- Be ready to compromise
- Follow through with deliverables – build credibility
Faculty Searches and Start-up

- How does the hire support the department’s strategic plan?
- What are the broader impacts of hiring in this area?
- Is it possible to get Provostial support (e.g. a matching position)
- Know in detail how start-up is supported. Talk to the Dean and other chairs!
Managing Up

- Partner with other Department Chairs
- Periodic Department Chair meetings w/o the Dean
- Agree on a few key messages
- Repeat and Repeat and Repeat!
- Give concrete examples and constructive feedback (e.g. re personnel or policy)
- Go to the Provost as a last resort
Working with the Provost

- Follow chain of command for resource requests (don’t do end runs here!)
- Work with your dean to discuss policy matters that you want to see addressed
- Get clarity from the dean about how s/he wants interactions with Provost to work
- Watch for ways to support both college AND campus goals and mission
Miscellaneous

- Come to meetings prepared
- Stay focused
- Keep on topic
- Only go to the dean when really needed
- Partner with Dean’s HR People
- Develop a great relationship with the Dean’s Assistant!